

Integrative Care for the Future

A major international conference on
Integrative Medicine in Cancer Care

Arnhem, 11 - 12 March 2011
Papendal Conference Centre

Integrative Care for the Future is an international organization devoted to the support, study and dissemination of evidence-based, complementary therapies that are used to control symptoms associated with cancer and other serious illnesses.

Integrative Medicine faces challenges as it attempts to develop a larger presence. This first international conference will address the economic, political, regulatory, educational and professional health care landscape in a diverse group of nations.

There will be a special emphasis of the impact of complementary therapies on patient compliance and the cost of cancer care.
